Meet me at the moon is a cute little story about a mama elephant and her baby being away from each other for a period of time. The moon is what connects them through distance, and when they meet again your heart will melt. The illustrations were very well done also, so this book really hits the top of my list.

My beloved mother passed recently and I used this book as a symbol of our love and our belief that we would one day see each other again. I read it to her at the funeral service, although we had been saying "I'll meet you at the moon" to each other for a long time before she passed. I then placed the book in her casket.
